What are cabochons?

Cabochons (pronounced "CAB-oh-shons") are smooth-top, flat-back stones that don't have facets. "Cabs," as they are often called, are produced in a variety of materials and shapes. They are used in many applications including jewelry, clothing, home-décor and crafts.

The classic cabochon has a medium-height smooth dome, but many people refer to cabochons as any flat back stone. Cabochon tops can also be low dome, high dome, buff top, flat, engraved, irregular and more (see illustration below).

Common Cabochon Dome Heights

Buff top cabochons are often used in cufflinks.

Our glass cabochons, currently sourced from Preciosa in the Czech Republic, are fabricated using the same techniques generations of makers have perfected over time. Our vintage cabochons are treasured by designers for limited edition and one-of-a-kind creations. We also offer high quality acrylic and resin cabochons from factories around the world, and an extensive line of natural gemstone cabochons (see our Genuine & Synthetic Stones and Beads Catalog).

Working with cabochons

Size and color may vary slightly in hand-worked glass cabochons, but our wide selection of items are calibrated to fit most standard-size settings. Cabs can also be prong-set, bezel-set, wire-wrapped, glued directly as embellishments and incorporated into beaded jewelry.

Brooch by Scarlett Menon featuring glass matte ribbed cabochons (see page 16).

Buff-Top Glass Cabochons

Our buff top cabochons have a low dome and a flat back. Because of their lower profile, they work well when used in rings, earrings, cufflinks and tuxedo studs. They are a great option for designs that incorporate a sleek, contemporary look.
